Learning outcomes	At the end of this learning unit, the student is able to : Students following this course learn to identify the function of a text and to describe its structure, i.e. how its different parts and ideas are linked together. Perfecting students' comprehension skills is a key focus and throughout the year students are taught effective reading strategies. In addition, students following this course learn: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>- the vocabulary taught during the course and provided in the self-study guide, and how to use it appropriately;</li> <li>- to identify the different parts of speech and explain the morphology of specific grammatical categories (compound and derivative words, etc.) ; and</li> <li>- to identify and use a range of lexical language features (definitions, collocations, synonyms, etc.).</li> </ul>
Evaluation methods	Summative assessment (written) at the end of the course unit. This year-long course is subdivided into two modules - MHAN1131A the first term (Q1) and MHAN1131B the second (Q2) - and has two separate exams. The global mark is an average calculated as described above (i.e. Q1:30% and Q2: 70% of the total mark). A 10/20 or higher mark for any exam will automatically be transferred to the second or third exam session and it will therefore not possible to re-sit the exam related to this module of the course.
Teaching methods	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>- Problem-based learning;</li> <li>- Practical/applied exercises requiring students' active participation;</li> <li>- Semi-autonomous learning of vocabulary.</li> </ul>
Content	Students learn how to overcome the principal barriers to comprehension, and thereby acquire the skills to translate English language texts into French correctly. The course highlights the features that characterise the written word in English and the specific difficulties these engender for the francophone reader. It develops students' meta-understanding and awareness of the strategies that can be deployed to resolve comprehension or translation difficulties. The course uses selected complete texts drawn from authentic English language press material. The course covers theoretical issues and includes practical or applied exercises designed to enrich students' range of expression.
