Teacher(s)	Jacquot Sophie ;
Language :	English
Place of the course	Bruxelles Saint-Louis
Main themes	This course provides a broad perspective on the emergence, development, and transformation of the EU's gender and non-discrimination policies. It also presents the main current issues, as well as the latest academic research in that area. Main topics include an exploration of the historical development of the EU's gender and non-discrimination policies since the Treaty of Rome; an overview of the legal foundations underpinning gender equality and the fight against discrimination within the EU; an analysis of the main principles and values that structure the EU's action (equal treatment, equal opportunities...); an examination of the existing institutional architecture (EIGE, FEMM...), and of the roles of the main public and private actors in the field (the "velvet triangle" and beyond); a study of the principle of gender/equality mainstreaming, whereby a gender and anti-discrimination perspective is integrated across the whole EU policy portfolio; an analysis of the impact of EU action at the national level; a focus on the intersectionality of discrimination, where students analyse how factors like race, ethnicity, sexuality, and disability can strengthen gender-based inequalities, and how this perspective is translated into policy-making; a critical assessment of contemporary oppositions and populist challenges to gender+ equality.
Learning outcomes	At the end of this learning unit, the student is able to : <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • understand European integration from a perspective of gender studies • develop expert knowledge on EU gender and anti-discrimination policies, as well as on the structures and instruments put in place to implement them • understand the historical, social, political, and legal contexts that have shaped the EU's approach to addressing inequalities • discuss and evaluate the effectiveness of these policies • identify the different public and private actors in the sector, acquire an in-depth knowledge of their positions, roles and responsibilities, and analyse their interactions • translate theoretical notions of equality and non-discrimination into policy practice, and recognise the theoretical relevance of policy debates • critically reflect on the wider implications of gender+ equality policies for European society.
Evaluation methods	Each student will be expected to carry out the following tasks: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Group presentation – article or oral presentation. Required. - Participation in a debate team. Required. - Final written work – policy brief and oral presentation. Required. - Current topics presentation (individual or in group). On a voluntary basis. Grading system <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Group presentation (article or oral presentation): 30% - Debate team: 20% - Individual policy brief and its oral presentation: 50% - Current topics in gender and non-discrimination in the EU: bonus (up to 2 points)

Teaching methods	Each session of the course is organised in 3 different steps: Step 1 – Current topics in gender and non-discrimination policies in the EU At the beginning of each session, a (group of) student(s) is in charge of a very short (5 minutes) oral presentation aimed at presenting to the rest of the class the current state of play regarding a “hot” topic of their choice related to gender and non-discrimination. They explain the nature of the debate, its context, and the position of the different actors. The presentation is followed by a 10-minute collective discussion of the issue at stake. Step 2 – Lecture Each session includes a lecture on the theme of the week. Step 3 – Presentation In order to offer either a complementary perspective on the theme of the week or to zoom in on a specific subject, the last part of the session is devoted to a student's presentation. These 20-minute collective presentations can be of two sorts: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Presentation of an article: presentation of the authors and of their approach; explanation of the research question, main notions, argument and results; critical analysis. - Oral presentation: presentation of the subject and of its context; problematisation; link with the course.
Content	This course provides a broad perspective on the emergence, development, and transformation of the EU's gender and non-discrimination policies. It also presents the main current issues linked to this topic in the EU public debate, as well as the latest academic research in that area. The course is part of the teaching programme of the Jean Monnet Chair EUGENDERING which aims at better understanding the challenges linked to the establishment of a Union of gender equality, non-discrimination and diversity. It will provide teaching and research material useful for the students, who will also be offered the opportunity to deepen their knowledge of the issues at stake, and to meet professionals working in the field, by participating in the events organised by the Chair.
