Teacher(s)	Francq Stéphanie ;Leboeuf Luc (compensates Francq Stéphanie) ;Marique Enguerrand (compensates Francq Stéphanie) ;
Language :	French
Place of the course	Louvain-la-Neuve
Main themes	The course focuses on the harmonisation of laws within the EU, as well as on the core impacts of the various EU policies. It analyses the reasons and conditions of the harmonization in each sector. It questions harmonisation's usefulness, its feasibility, and its results. The concept of regulatory competition provides a red line of the reasoning.
Learning outcomes
Evaluation methods	A written exam will be given in session. The student will be able to use the reading file that has been made available.
Teaching methods	The course is based on the Socratic method and is therefore largely interactive. Students will be required to do relatively extensive reading every week. The documents read will be discussed during the session (CJEU rulings, regulations, directives, articles of doctrine etc). It is therefore essential to complete the readings before the class. Students may be asked to make oral presentations in groups during the sessions. The course is taught in French. At least a passive knowledge of English is essential in order to read a series of law and political sciences journal articles in English and to attend the presentations given by external speakers (e.g. European officials).
Content	The course shows and questions the relationship between legislative harmonisation and the EU integration process. The course is based on the hypothesis of integration through law, which it places in a contemporary context by integrating questions about European governance, the role of secondary legislation and institutional developments aimed at fostering common practices, such as the agencification. Different sectoral policies of the EU are presented under a legal angle in order to better understand the relationship between legislative harmonisation and the EU integration dynamics. The course consists of two parts. The first part focusses on the internal market, and the second one on the area of freedom, security and justice. Both parts includes a discussion of the different modalities of harmonization and their stakes, as well as of their concrete legal developments.
Other infos	A general course on EU Law is a prerequisite
