	The dissertation for the end of the Bachelor cycle is an important stage in the introduction to personal research. It must demonstrate the aptitude of its author to correctly present the results of a personal piece of work, that is both objective and methodical. Similar to the other forms of learning, the dissertation is an essential component of the programme to which it belongs.
	The dissertation at the end of the Bachelor cycle enables the student to:
	1 • define a subject within a narrow range; • carry out a bibliographical research and collect data with the aid of the research tools specific to the discipline; • organise, analyse and interpret the data using the appropriate methodology; • prepare a text of a university level, which requires the use of the correct level of language, an appropriate terminology, clarity and relevance in the structure, coherent presentation of the arguments and a rigorous use of bibliographical references.
Evaluation methods	The promoter will evaluate the dissertation end of Bachelor cycle, taking account of the aptitude to put into practice the specific desired competences. There is no oral defence of the dissertation. Generative artificial intelligence (AI) must be used responsibly and in accordance with the practices of academic and scientific integrity. As scientific integrity requires that sources be cited, the use of AI must always be reported. The use of artificial intelligence for tasks where it is explicitly forbidden will be treated as a case of irregularity or plagiarism.
Content	The dissertation for the end of the Bachelor cycle is made up of: • a short introduction presenting the text, or the corpus of texts and the researched theme; • a personal translation of ancient text or texts in an Oriental language; • a structured and reasoned commentary highlighting the contribution the text or texts makes to the theme which they deal with; • a critical apparatus correctly drawn up and a bibliography. The promoter (or supervisor) will assist the student to improve his research method, his bibliography, the editing and the layout of his work (explanation on the use of word processors) and the presentation of a title page. The main body of the dissertation for the end of Bachelor cycle, excluding the bibliography, the illustrations and the appendices should be between 20 and 25 pages (that is between 40.000 and 50.000 characters).
Inline resources	Cf. the vade-mecum and the evaluation grid.
Other infos	The subject must be specified by November 1, with the agreement of the promoter.
