Teaching methods	This course is a lecture that introduces in a general way to the history of law and institutions. The subject matter is nevertheless illustrated by the reading and commentary of texts (which are translated) or by legal iconography. The students have at their disposal a frame-syllabus, which includes a detailed course outline (including technical terms, names of people and the main chronological markers) and a brief bibliography, enabling to deepen the subject matter.
Content	The course aims to describe and put in their political, economic and social context, public law institutions (administration, legal, finance). It is centred on the theme of the evolution of the state in Western Europe, especially in France, England and Germany (Empire), from the Germanic kingdoms (fifth-sixth century) to the monarchies of the sixteenth to eighteenth century. Illustrated by the analysis a number of texts and iconography, it also addresses the issue of the formal sources of law in the same chronological and geographical settings.
Bibliography	Une bibliographie sommaire permettant d'approfondir la matière est fournie dans le syllabus-cadre.
