Learning outcomes
Evaluation methods	The final grade will be composed of three integrated components, corresponding to three types of assignments: • Creation of a video (by a group of students) demonstrating the application of the methods and content taught during the semester (30% of the final grade). • Completion of a written text at home applying the methods and content taught during the semester (30% of the final grade). • A written exam at the end of the semester (40% of the final grade). The use of artificial intelligence in the preparation of written assignments or oral presentations, if proven, will result in a grade of 0, as it contravenes scientific and academic integrity practices.
Teaching methods	Lecture-based teaching, group work, exercises, and classroom activities.
Content	• The conceptions and purposes of education in general and school education in particular; • The philosophical concepts and views on educability, social justice and educational justice, equity, autonomy, citizenship, and responsibility in education; • The condition and rights of the children • The ethical and deontological foundations of the teaching profession.
