Learning outcomes
Evaluation methods	Continuous assessment of participation in course activities (group presentations during sessions): 50% of the final grade. Oral exam on the course material: 50% of the final grade. For the second session, the participation grade is retained if it was passed; if not, a written assignment will be required. As for the oral exam, it must be retaken under the same conditions if it was not passed in the first session.
Teaching methods	The course will alternate between oral presentations (online or face-to-face depending on the health situation) given by recognised external speakers and the teacher, and work in the flipped classroom based on social science research (journalism studies) carried out by the students. There will also be Q&A sessions (via teams or face-to-face) and debates between students, lecturers and teachers.
Content	The course raises students' awareness of the way in which journalistic treatment of certain issues and/or certain groups/actors can shape, crystallise and direct their media representation. It focuses in particular on the issues involved in integrating diversity and minorities (of opinion, gender, origin, religion, etc.) into news research and dissemination practices.
Inline resources	Online resources will be specified throughout the semester on Moodle according to the direction taken by the course.
Bibliography	Une bibliographie progressive sera proposée et commentée au fil des séances de cours
Other infos	All the relevant information on these procedures and on how the activities will be carried out (timetable, detailed instructions, assessment criteria, etc.) will be presented during the first session and will be available on Moodle. Some resources (e.g. bibliographical resources or explanatory videos) will be available in English.
