Language :	French
Place of the course	Louvain-la-Neuve
Main themes	The course analyses, on the one hand, one of the fundamental freedoms of European law, namely the free movement of persons (included the free provision of services), and, on the other, the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union. The course focuses notably on the meaning to be given to concepts used in these areas ("workers" ' art. 45 TFEU; "free movement" ; "internal situation"; "national of a Member State"; "Union citizen" ' art. 20-21 TFEU; "family reunification"; "obstacle"; "imperative reason related to the general interest"; "proportionality"; "fundamental right"; "general principle of law"; "implementation of EU law"; "horizontal direct effect" ;).
Learning outcomes
Evaluation methods	Oral exam (information on Moodle)
Teaching methods	Teaching takes the form of active pedagogy. Students watch videos and do preliminary readings, particularly readings of case law. These readings are then debated in class and a synthesis is drawn up from the theoretical lessons.
Content	The course examines the status of persons in the EU. This covers the free movement of persons, but also issues related to European citizenship and certain migration-related issues. A more detailed content of the course is presented on Moodle.
