

2.00 credits

30.0 h

Q1

This learning unit is not open to incoming exchange students!

Language :	French
Place of the course	Louvain-la-Neuve
Main themes	Legal methodology is the discipline concerned with studying and learning techniques for researching, understanding and referencing sources of law, and then, on the basis of these sources, drafting a legal study. The first step is to identify and distinguish between the sources of law – legislation, case law and doctrine – and to understand the multiple and complex relationships between them. Students will then become familiar with the methods used to research and find legislation, case law and doctrine relating to a given legal issue, using – in particular, but not exclusively – the powerful IT tools now available. In order to be used appropriately, sources of law must be properly understood: emphasis will therefore be placed on highlighting the principles governing the reading and analysis of legislative texts, court and tribunal decisions, and contributions from legal doctrine. It will also be necessary, of course, to learn the many rules governing how to cite sources of law in a legal study, without which the fundamental objectives of scientific rigour and intellectual honesty cannot be met. Finally, students will be provided with a wide range of guidelines and advice on how to produce a rigorous legal study that is likely to be well received by the legal community. In addition to these traditional aspects of legal methodology, the course also raises students' awareness of the transformations brought about by the emergence and development of artificial intelligence (AI) tools. Part of the course focuses on how AI systems work, their possibilities and their limitations. It also covers how AI can potentially be used, from the very beginning of legal training, to support research and understanding of sources and/or as a learning support tool. In this context, students will be able to familiarise themselves with AI tools specifically developed by the University.
Learning outcomes
Evaluation methods	The assessment for the legal methodology course consists of an oral examination and a written examination held at the end of the term.
Teaching methods	At UCLouvain, the teaching of legal methodology consists of two closely complementary components: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • a 30-hour 'lecture' course given in an auditorium, during which the rules and methods for achieving the objectives described above are taught, or at least the most essential of them ; • a series of exercises carried out as part of the tutorials on legal methodology and introduction to law. These sessions are compulsory and take place in small groups of students. They draw on the knowledge acquired in the legal methodology course and in the Introduction to Law - Part I and Introduction to Law - Part II courses. They will provide an opportunity to illustrate and apply the rules and methods taught in the lectures through a wide range of personal and group exercises. They culminate in the drafting of an initial legal study submitted by each student at the end of the academic year.
Content	Chapter 1: General introduction Chapter 2: Researching, understanding and citing legislation Chapter 3: Researching, understanding and citing case law Chapter 4: Researching, understanding and citing legal doctrine Chapter 5: Legal writing Chapter 6: The progressive, critical and ethical use of artificial intelligence
Inline resources	To achieve the course objectives and successfully complete the assessment tests, students have the following teaching tools at their disposal:

	<ul style="list-style-type: none">- the Moodle page for the legal methodology course: here, students will find the course and assessment requirements;- PowerPoint presentations made available to students on the Moodle page and used to support the courses; Students are also encouraged to purchase the 3rd edition of the book Leçons de méthodologie juridique (Lessons in Legal Methodology) published by Larcier.
Faculty or entity in charge	DRT