Teacher(s)	. SOMEBODY ;Goutsmedt Aurélien ;
Language :	French
Place of the course	Louvain-la-Neuve
Learning outcomes
Evaluation methods	Students' knowledge and skills will be assessed in two ways: - reading assignments to be submitted throughout the course; - a written exam at the end of the semester.
Teaching methods	The course is theoretical and interactive. Students will be asked to prepare a collection of texts that will help them better understand the course content and support classroom discussions during each session.
Content	The course presents the important concepts and issues of international political economy through a historical approach. The course will cover the following topics: - Key concepts of international political economy: power and hegemony, the international monetary system, financialization, etc. - The Bretton Woods system (1945-1973) and the role of financialization in its collapse; - The turning point of the 1970s, financial deregulation, and its consequences for countries in the Global South; - The intensification of the financialization of economies since the 1990s and its consequences in terms of economic and political independence; - The new role of states in globalized and financialized economies.
Inline resources	Course materials (slides, texts, etc.) are posted on Moodle.
